

Publications also proliferated. A collection started at the UNAM's Legal Research Institute under the auspices of Pedro Salazar, coordinated by Nuria González Martín and with the technical support of Raúl Márquez, produced numerous high-level monographs in record time. The Ibero-American Institute of Parliamentary Law, with the impetus of Sergio Díaz Ricci in Argentina, Javier García Roca in Spain, and Daniel Barceló in Mexico, also enriched the doctrinal panorama with valuable contributions.

In the following pages I attempt to offer a brief constitutional analysis of Mexico, accompanied by proposals to revive institutional life from a democratic perspective. I start from the conviction that Mexico needs, deserves, and can have better institutions and a better destiny.
